WELCOME TO METRO.US

JOE PANTORNO, SPORTS EDITOR

Sure, I could attempt to build up the hype surrounding the 2018 Winter Olympic Games in Pyeongchang, South Korea, with the cliché "sports brings the world together" mumbo jumbo. That's all fine and dandy, but I'm tired of thinking about politics while watching sports. What I am always most excited about is the fact that over a two-week span, no-names become the darlings of nations all over the world. With the opening ceremony ushering in the 23rd Winter Olympiad, we'll be spoiled with a new batch of heroes as we get to sit back, relax and watch formerly ordinary Americans achieve lifelong dreams. Read more on page 14-15 and at metro.us.

WALL STREET STOCKS TUMBLE AGAIN

I U.S. stocks plunged anew on Thursday in another trading session with big swings, as volatility remained high and investors failed to see a bottom in the market ahead. The S&P 500 and the Dow industrials confirmed they were in correction territory, both falling more than 10 percent from their Jan. 26 record highs. The S&P 500 slumped 3.8 percent on Thursday, while the Dow dropped 4.2 percent as losses accelerated late in the trading day. Thursday marked the S&P 500's biggest drop in more than six years. "The dust hasn't settled yet, and I think both buyers and sellers are trying to figure out what this market really wants to do," said Jonathan Corpina, senior managing partner for Meridian Equity Partners in New York. "I would think that this continues to happen for the next few trading sessions for everything to kind of get flushed out."

WH: STAFF COULD 'HAVE DONE BETTER' ON PORTER

2 The White House on Thursday said that Chief of Staff John Kelly and other staff "could all have done better" in handling former aide Rob Porter once they were aware of domestic abuse allegations against him. "I think it's fair to say that we all could have done better over the last few days in dealing with this situation. This was a Rob Porter that we all have dealt with," White House Spokesman Raj Shah told reporters. "The emerging reports were not reflective of the individual we've come to know and I am not going to get into the tick-tock of all this ... it is all a part of ongoing investigation." The White House was not aware of the extent of the domestic abuse allegations against former White House aide Rob Porter until photographs of an ex-wife with a black eye emerged on Wednesday, a White House spokesman said Thursday.

TRUMP MAY TARGET IMMIGRANTS USING BENEFITS

4 The Trump administration is considering making it harder for foreigners living in the U.S. to get permanent residency if they or their American-born children use public benefits such as food assistance, in a move that could sharply restrict legal immigration. The Department of Homeland Security has drafted rules seen by Reuters that would allow immigration officers to scrutinize a potential immigrant's use of certain taxpayer-funded public benefits to determine if they could become a public burden. The draft rules are a sharp departure from current guidelines, which specifically bar authorities from considering such non-cash benefits in deciding a person's eligibility to stay in the country. Receiving such benefits could weigh against an applicant, even if they were for an immigrant's U.S. citizen children, according to the new proposal.

GOVERNMENT PREPARING FOR SHUTDOWN

5 The White House's Office of Management and Budget was preparing for a possible government shutdown if Congress could not pass a funding bill by midnight, an OMB official said Thursday. "The Office of Management and Budget is currently preparing for a lapse in appropriations. As we stated earlier today, we support the Bipartisan Budget Act and urge Congress to send it to the president's desk without delay," the official said. Hopes for a quick vote to keep the government operating hit a snag when Republican Sen. Rand Paul first wanted a debate on his amendment to kill the legislation's increased federal spending. It was unclear whether the Senate and House would be able to pass a funding bill by midnight, when existing federal funds expire. Without new funds, federal agencies would be ordered to partially shut down.

NYC launches site providing resources on domestic violence

NYCHope will help those experiencing abuse, and advise others on how to safely intervene.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Each year, New York City's domestic violence hotline receives more than 80,000 phone calls.

To help those experiencing domestic violence, and to equip others with information on how to safely step in, New York City first lady Chirlane McCray announced on Thursday the launch of a web portal called NYCHope.

NYCHope is the city's first-ever web-based platform dedicated to providing resources to domestic-violence survivors, officials said.

Its launch is accompanied by a domestic-violence-awareness campaign — the first such citywide campaign in more than a decade — called "We Understand."

The web portal and the campaign came out of recommendations from the NYC Domestic Violence Task Force.

"The innovative NYC-Hope portal and 'We Understand' ad campaign will help educate New Yorkers about the complexities of intimate partner violence, and make it easier for survivors to access the services they need for safety and heal from trauma," McCray said in a statement.

The "We Understand" campaign will include ads displayed on bus shelters, subways, the Staten Island Ferry and social media platforms, and will run for 12 weeks.

That campaign aims to connect domestic-violence survivors and their loved ones to NYCHope, where they can find services to get help.

The site also provides information about what a healthy relationship looks like and how to identify signs of abuse, as well as a guide for how to help a family member or friend experiencing such abuse.

Burglar beats Bronx grandma with crowbar

A Bronx grandmother was brutally attacked in her home by a crowbar-wielding burglar earlier this week, the New York Daily News reported Thursday.

The 64-year-old victim, identified only as Nat, was assaulted Monday morning after finding the masked suspect on a second-floor landing as she came back inside her Pelham Gardens home from moving her car, she told the Daily News.

"When he jumped in front of me, you have no idea how it felt," Nat said.

She screamed upon seeing the burglar, and he covered her mouth, pushed her into a bedroom and demanded money. Nat told him there wasn't much cash in the home and grabbed his mask, which is "what made him mad," she said.

The suspect then attacked her with a crowbar, hitting her several times on the head and elbow, which was shattered in the melee.

"I thought, 'If he hits me again, he will kill me for sure,'" Nat said.

Her attacker tried to tie up her arms, but because of her elbow injury, Nat could not put her arm behind her back, so he bound her ankles with a telephone cord that he ripped out of the wall.

He then proceeded to search the bedroom and went through her purse. He made off with about $500 and jewelry, including Nat's wedding band, which she had worn for more than four decades and gave him after he almost broke her finger trying to take it, she said.

A few minutes after the suspect left, Nat untied herself and ran to a neighbor, who dialed 911. She was treated at Jacobi Medical Center and received six stitches above her eye. She will require surgery on her arm.

The suspect is still at large. Police said that he is 5 feet 3 inches tall and was last seen wearing a hoodie, black jacket, backpack, blue jeans and tan boots. NIKKI M. MASCAU

Six months into the MTA's subway action plan, straphangers have seen modest improvements, including a drop in major disruptions, new data shows. GETTY IMAGES

Six months in, how's the MTA subway action plan going?

While some areas like signal and track problems remain unchanged, there has been a modest drop in major disruptions, new data show.

NIKKI M. MASCALI
nikki.mascali@metro.us

Back in July, the MTA revealed its action plan to fix the city's aged and in-crisis subway system and promised straphangers visible improvements within one year. So how is the agency doing now that we're nearly at the halfway mark of that vow?

According to data cited by The New York Times on Wednesday, there have been moderate improvements made in January, the last month for which such information is available, the Times reported.

"We need to get back to reasonable, defensible level of service reliability, where customers can rely on the subway service, can expect not to be delayed," said Andy Byford, president of New York City Transit, which oversees subways, buses, paratransit services and the Staten Island Railway. "That is still not good enough. We still need to make trips shorter and wait times shorter."

Byford took over NYCT last month, after spending five years at the Toronto Transit Commission. During his tenure with the TTC, Byford developed a plan to modernize its system and improve operations, which saw a subsequent reduction in subway delays, record customer-satisfaction levels, an up-within the system, including a drop in major service disruptions. There were 50 major weekday issues in December, the most current month for which data are available. Comparatively, December 2016 saw 76 major incidents.

Trains are also traveling farther before they experience a breakdown, going roughly 120,000 miles in December, compared with 105,000 miles the year prior.

Despite the repair of more than 7,000 track deficiencies, the ever-present signal issues and track problems remained relatively unchanged from August through No-dated signal system and a subway-line extension, all of which resulted in the TTC being named the 2017 Outstanding Transit System of the Year by the American Public Transportation Association.

The first phase of the MTA's Subway Action Plan comes with an $836 million price tag geared to "attack" 79 percent of common subway issues like signal and track maintenance, car reliability, system safety and cleanliness, customer communications and more, Chairman Joe Lhota said in July, just weeks after Gov. Andrew Cuomo declared a state of emergency for the system.

NJ ski facility changes tri-state kids' lives on and off the slopes

The now-defunct Hidden Valley ski resort in Vernon, New Jersey, was where Donna Weinbrecht learned to ski long before she won the first gold medal for freestyle skiing at the 1992 Winter Olympics.

Hidden Valley closed in 2012, but its slopes may still be the stomping grounds for future Olympians as the resort lives on as the National Winter Activity Center. The NWAC, which opened in 2015, is a nonprofit educational facility that introduces kids to downhill and cross-country skiing and snowboarding.

"They're provided with all of the equipment and clothing they need, the instruction to master the sport, mentoring and healthy meals," CEO Schone Malliet said. "Our core principle is to give them a path to go as far as they want with any one of the disciplines they pursue."

The kids, who might not experience these sports if not for NWAC, are exposed to competition and Olympic athletes like alpine skier Ted Ligety, which allows them to "aspire and have the inspiration to do that and show it's possible to go as far as they want," Malliet said.

Participation costs $450, but NWAC clients are primarily youth-serving organizations in New Jersey and New York that may rely on funding to offset costs. The NYC YMCA helped pilot the program in 2015 and sends 150 kids to NWAC annually.

"The main benefit I see from our city kids visiting the NWAC is being able to overcome their fear of something new and challenging themselves to learn how to ski," said Latoya Jackson, associate executive director at the Harlem YMCA. "With the support of their ski instructors and chaperones, they have learned that it's OK to fall because it's all part of the experience and that it will only make them stronger."

There are off-slope benefits, too, as kids who participate in the program "are always ready to lead an activity during after-school when called upon," Jackson added.

NWAC participation has grown to "around 1,600 to 1,800" this year from 180 kids in 2015, Malliet said. "We're hoping to hit 8,000 kids by 2022 or 2023."

For him, the best part of his job is seeing the kids smile. "Smiles first of being out there and the smiles of achievement," he said. "I've been known to blubber a lot when I see it because you get a sense that it's made an impact and a difference in their lives."

How three American heroes became Hollywood stars

Clint Eastwood's drama is out Feb. 9.
WARNER BROS

The trio behind the story of "The 15:17 to Paris" open up about their extraordinary journey.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

It's easy to see why real-life-terrorist-foilers Spencer Stone, Alek Skarlatos and Anthony Sadler couldn't turn down Clint Eastwood's offer to star as themselves in "The 15:17 to Paris." Even if they didn't have any acting experience.

"It's important for people to go deeper than the headline," Sadler says. "The movie does a really good job of showing just how ordinary we are. Hopefully you can identify with one or all three of us, and hopefully this film can inspire people to overcome adversity in their real lives."

That hope inspired the trio to collaborate with journalist Jeffrey E. Stern on the book "The 15:17 to Paris: The True Story of a Terrorist, a Train and Three American Heroes." It also helped Stone, Skarlatos and Sadler to seek out Clint Eastwood at the Guys Choice Awards and pitch their incredible true story to him as a film.

"After reading our book, [Eastwood] he realized the craziness of the whole thing and how truly lucky we are to be alive," Stone says. "I think it was just one of those stories that he typically likes. He even told us that he stopped working on another project to work on ours."

Still, it was never their intention to even appear in the film — let alone lead it.

"That was a pretty 11th-hour decision on Clint's part," Skarlatos explains. "They had been casting for over a month and then three weeks before filming, they called us down to Burbank. We just assumed it was to talk to the actors."

Instead, the Oscar-winning director wanted them to re-create the events of that fateful day in August, when Stone, Skarlatos and Sadler — with the help of Mark Moogalian and Chris Norman — subdued Ayoub El Khazzani as he tried to open fire on a crowded train traveling from Amsterdam to Paris.

But rather than having any concern about reliving the near tragedy, the trio were instead more daunted by appearing on screen.

"It wasn't anything that traumatic for us," Skarlatos says. "Nobody died the day of the attack. There was obviously doubt about us acting because it was such a risk. But eventually Clint gave us the confidence to say yes."

Surprisingly, Eastwood told Stone, Skarlatos and Sadler not to take any acting classes ahead of their big-screen debuts, insisting, "I just want you to do it as you did it."

Clearly they couldn't be happier with the result, especially as "The 15:17 to Paris" is grounded in a reality that highlights their heroics, but doesn't make them out to be superhuman.

"A lot of people think that it is some trait that just the three of us have," Sadler says. "But the film does a good job of showing that we are just three ordinary guys, and people will be able to identify with that."

BQE Atlantic to Sands PUBLIC SCOPING MEETING

Tuesday, February 27, 2018

5:00 p.m. - 8:00 p.m.

Dock Street School

19 Dock Street, Brooklyn, NY 11201

The New York City Department of Transportation (NYCDOT) is holding a Scoping Meeting and preparing a Draft Environmental Impact Statement (DEIS) consistent with New York City Environmental Quality Review (CEQR) regulations for the replacement or rehabilitation of the BQE / I-278 from Atlantic Avenue to Sands Street. The Draft Scope of Work is available for review online at www.BQE-i278.com and at select public locations, including the Brooklyn Public Library Main Branch. During the Public Scoping meeting, a presentation at 5:30 p.m. will be followed by public testimony taken on the Draft Scope of Work. Public comments are requested with respect to matters to be addressed in the DEIS. Written comments on the Draft Scope of Work will be accepted until 5:00 p.m. Monday, March 12, 2018.

NYCDOT will have two American Sign Language (ASL) interpreters at the Scoping Meeting, as well as a Spanish certified translator. These accommodations are intended for individuals with disabilities or language barriers. Any additional requests for special accommodations should be made by Monday, February 19th at 4:00 p.m. For more information, locations of the Draft Scope of Work, or if any special accommodations are needed, please contact the BQE Project Team during regular business hours or leave a message at 332-999-4520 or info@bqe-i278.com.

"15:17 to Paris"

Director: Clint Eastwood
Stars: Spencer Stone, Anthony Sadler, Alek Skarlatos
Rating: PG-13

● ● ● ● ●

With "The 15:17 to Paris," Clint Eastwood decided to take a risk. Not only did he cast the three real-life American heroes of the 2015 terrorist attack in France in their own story, but he also told them they didn't need to act. But "act" they did. As a result, Eastwood's gamble completely backfires.

The film is, in a word, excruciating. The three leads are unaided by Eastwood's emotionless direction and completely hindered by a heavy-handed and blatant script. Not even the climax of the film, where we see Spencer Stone, Anthony Sadler, and Alek Skarlatos subdue the terrorist and save the lives of those onboard can make up for the painstaking tediousness that precedes it.

Here's hoping this film will quickly fade into obscurity, forever overshadowed by what they actually did that day. Because these heroes deserve much, much better than "The 15:17 to Paris."

GREGORY WAKEMAN

"Peter Rabbit"

Director: Will Gluck
Stars: James Corden, Domhnall Gleeson, Rose Byrne

● ● ● ● ●

There are two ways to look at "Peter Rabbit." There will be the die-hard Beatrix Potter fans who can't forgive the film for being at odds with the seminal source material. Then there will be those that quickly forgive it because it is just a lot of fun.

I'm in the latter camp. "Peter Rabbit" is a film of such pace and verve that I quickly became swept up in it. Domhnall Gleeson shows an adeptness for physical comedy, and James Corden thrives as the titular bunny.

The film is admittedly a tad too hollow and not terribly original. You could easily surmise that it's nothing more than a good time for the whole family. But considering that's all it clearly wants to be, it pleasantly delivers.

Knicks nab Mudiay at deadline

New York adds another young point guard to the mix alongside Frank Ntilikina.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The New York Knicks have acquired guard Emmanuel Mudiay from the Denver Nuggets in a three-team trade alongside the Dallas Mavericks. In return, the Knicks sent Doug McDermott to the Mavericks while the Nuggets nab Devin Harris from Dallas. The Nuggets and Knicks also swapped second-round picks.

Mudiay was the seventh-overall pick in the 2015 NBA draft and was expected to be the point guard of the future in Denver. However, development issues saw him lose the starting job to Jamal Murray as he hasn't started a single game at the position this season.

Over his first three seasons, Mudiay has averaged 11.1 points and 4.3 assists, but his inability to consistently score spoiled the high expectations that came with him. Only Stanley Johnson and Marcus Smart have played as many minutes as Mudiay this year and have shot worse than his 37.5 percent from the field.

A change of scenery could be beneficial for the 21-year-old, though he will be entering a pressure-packed market like New York.

On top of that, the Knicks already have a point guard of the future in rookie Frank Ntilikina, who was selected eight overall back in June. Granted, his selection was one of the final actions of the Phil Jackson regime and the actions of this deal by new management could be an indicator that they don't believe in Ntilikina.

Ideally, these two could share the floor if the Knicks are looking to run a smaller lineup. But neither Mudiay or Ntilikina hold the scoring prowess necessary for one of them to shift to the shooting guard role. Now that the Knicks have two young players who don't possess much depth-chart mobility and need a lot of work at the NBA level, Mudiay and Ntilikina futures' could be hurt.

It remains to be seen which role Mudiay would even take at the point-guard position as the Knicks already have Jarrett Jack and Trey Burke ahead of Ntilikina on the depth chart.

In the process, the Knicks lost their main backup at the small forward position in McDermott, who provided 7.2 points and a nearly 39-percent mark from three-point range. But after the injury of Kristaps Porzingis, the Knicks' firesale looks to be on.

It just depends on if they'll run out of time or not considering the trade deadline comes at 3 p.m.

Aries Helping others will lead to rewards. You cannot be faulted if you do your best and are honest about your feelings. Walk away from petty arguments.

Taurus Don't donate money if you don't have the funds. Offer your time, but don't be taken you for granted. It's admirable to want to help, but make it clear what you can do.

Gemini Partnerships will make a difference to your future. Whether a personal or professional connection, the discussions and the promises you make will help you excel.

Cancer Emotional deception will throw you off guard. Don't let a disagreement lead to an argument. Instead, state facts, listen to viewpoints and find common ground.

Leo Love, romance and personal improvements are highlighted. Make arrangements with someone special that will discuss plans. Invest more time and money in your future.

Virgo Don't get angry when you should be looking for solutions. Question what's transpired and be willing to admit to anything you may have misunderstood. Keep the peace.

Libra A short trip with someone you love will bring you closer together. Personal changes will make you feel good about the way you look and what you have to offer.

Scorpio What you want to do will not sit well with someone you live with or love. Find a compromise or offer an incentive that will allow you to explore your pursuits.

Sagittarius Emotions will fester if you don't channel your energy into something physical. Don't take risks, but do take on a challenge that will tire you out.

Capricorn Someone will take advantage if you are too helpful. Ask questions and determine if someone is merely lazy or actually in dire need of assistance.

Aquarius Consider how you are using your skills to bring in cash, and look for new and diverse ways to put your talents to good use. A change will do you good.

Pisces You'll end up in a compromising position if you choose to battle. Make sure you have the facts and that you're willing to lose if you end up in a no-win situation. EUGENIA LAST
